Home Office makes £500m from ‘hostile’ immigration fees

◆ NEW

The Home Office has been accused of profiteering from soaring immigration fees that delivered a £500 million surplus last year. An analysis by The Times shows how charges levied on hundreds of thousands of people for British residency and citizenship have risen sharply in the past five years with...

The system keeps families like ours in debt

◆ NEW

Michelle Ezeuko was 19, had lived in Britain for ten years and should have become eligible for citizenship but incorrect legal advice plunged her into the hostile environment. A mistake in her application meant that she “fell out of the system” and became an undocumented migrant facing problems getting NHS care and into university. “I...

Hostile environment puts young in legal limbo

◆ NEW

Theresa May’s hostile environment created a set of policies designed to deprive people of some of the fundamentals of life: work, medical treatment in hospital, maternity care, rented homes, bank accounts, driving licences. Equally insidious is how difficult it has become for undocumented people to get and keep...
